ON September 24, 1954, Colonel Henry, of the French General Staff, showed his colleagues a piece of paper which had been torn up and which he had placed together again. It was the "borderline" of military information provided to the German military attaché in Paris by a person or persons unknown but presumably a high official in the French General Staff. The "borderline" was a piece of paper which was torn up and which he had placed together again. It was the "borderline" of military information provided to the German military attaché in Paris by a person or persons unknown but presumably a high official in the French General Staff.

SIXTY years later to a day another case of espionage appeared to be in the offing. Again there was an "borderline" of military information provided to the German military attaché in Paris by a person or persons unknown but presumably a high official in the French General Staff. The "borderline" was a piece of paper which was torn up and which he had placed together again. It was the "borderline" of military information provided to the German military attaché in Paris by a person or persons unknown but presumably a high official in the French General Staff.

THE story is fairly complicated. It began about a fortnight ago when Jean Dides, a former high official of the Soviet, in charge of Communist affairs, was examined for several hours concerning confidential information found in his desk about a recent session of the National Defence Council. Dides explained that he had received them from an old acquaintance, a contact with the Communists. He had tried to warn the Government, but he said, all those in charge of Communist affairs had been transferred from their posts under the present government. M. Mitterand, the Minister for the Interior, emphatically denied this allegation. But Dides refused to reveal the name of his informant, who, he said, would be in mortal danger. Obviously he did not trust the new security chiefs very much and there were some who were hostile professional competitors between the various intelligence services.

A T this point some of M. Mitterand's well-wishers from "L'Humanité" and fellow travellers like Alexander Werth from the "New Statesman" (they have been protect him from these friends) suggested that this was a plot by right-wing elements trying to overthrow the Government. The Communists darkly hinted at some devilish American intrigue, and suggested that the man who had exposed the leak not the spy, should be investigated.

FOR a few days the danger would be made to hush up the whole case. Even if temporarily successful, this would have resulted in a major political crisis. The Government, and in particular M. François Mitterand, the young and energetic Minister of the Interior, who had been charged with the investigation during his early days, decided however to go ahead whatever the results. Some courage was shown to take the case to the Dreyfus trial, he came to believe that the justice must come out of the Government. The Communists, however, were not so easily satisfied. M. Andre Baranes, Minister of the Interior, told out. He was a correspondent of "Liberation", the Communist paper which has been an advocate of the "borderline" in recent years. But those who expected that the case would not be a success, were disappointed. The investigation was not a success, but those who expected that the case would not be a success, were disappointed.

THE investigation will go on and will be fully published. What has emerged is the hardy sensational fact that the Communists try to get military and political information of interest to them in France and in all other Western countries, and that the counter-espionage services have their informants among the Communist ranks. Some of the spies work for two or more employers. What was there in maintaining spying networks which is difficult to cancel out each other in the face of the world's Communist who will probably believe correct information. The investigation will go on and will be fully published. What has emerged is the hardy sensational fact that the Communists try to get military and political information of interest to them in France and in all other Western countries, and that the counter-espionage services have their informants among the Communist ranks.

Britain Willing to Talk Over Soviet Arms Plan

NEW YORK, Monday (Reuter). — Mr. Selwyn Lloyd, British Minister of State, said today that Britain was prepared to deal with Russia's latest disarmament proposals "on their merits."

Referring to the plan proposed last Thursday by Mr. Andre Vyshinsky, Mr. Lloyd told the U.N. General Assembly that the Russians "appear to have moved towards the Anglo-French proposals (made in London last June) — that is a fact to be welcomed."

"It may be that their resolution is put forward solely to confuse the political situation in countries considering their self-defence contribution," Mr. Lloyd said.

However, that Britain is prepared to deal with the proposals on their merits and to work with the Disarmament Commission and the technical bodies which will have to examine certain aspects of the proposals.

His comments were the West's first official reaction to the plan advanced by Mr. Vyshinsky.

Mr. Lloyd said the way in which the Soviet proposals were couched they were not altogether clear and would require careful examination — particularly in regard to the nature and powers of the international control organization which was essential for any disarmament plan.

Regarding the scope of a disarmament plan he pointed out that it would be possible to list quickly "what we want to prohibit and what we want to restrict." On atomic weapons he said "if the Soviet Government have weapons, in advance of a disarmament agreement, that is a step forward."

Referring to "peaceful co-existence," Mr. Lloyd said that "Communist parties everywhere, whether in Europe, Africa or Asia, are working to overthrow the existing order. The aim is constant, it cannot be denied that the inspiration is a good deal of the kind of the Communist Party of China and the Soviet Union."

"A real change of attitude in Moscow and Peking would quickly be reflected in real changes in policy. We know that it lies within the power of these two governments to make these changes."

"But there is much evidence at the present time that peaceful co-existence represents in the eyes of the Soviet Government a device for avoiding an atomic world war, but apart from that, the continued support of disruptive and subversive forces working for the Communist world revolution," said Mr. Lloyd. "It lies with the Moscow and Peking Governments to refute this evidence by a real change in their policy."

Mr. Lloyd said in the Middle East Britain had made great efforts to produce a better atmosphere. He mentioned the agreement reached with Iran over the Abadan oil refinery, and the recently initiated work of the Egyptian Government on the Suez Canal, which he said would be a "step forward."

He also referred to the agreement that has been signed between Saudi Arabia and Britain "acting on behalf of neighbouring States" about methods of settling boundary disputes which had been causing much bad feeling.

Thirteen Europeans Wounded in Rabat

RABAT, Monday (Reuter). — Six Americans and seven Europeans were injured here last night by grenades thrown into the town of two cafes.

Two of the Americans were taken to hospital. M. Marmon, a football referee, was the most seriously hurt. The Americans, three soldiers and three women, were at a large cafe in the centre of the town. Their injuries were slight.

The two attacks occurred within a minute of each other. The grenade throwers were not caught.

Two Americans known for their pro-French sympathies were shot and seriously wounded in the past 24 hours by hand grenades that got away.

ROME, Monday. — Premier Mario De Gasperi will announce the Trieste pact in the Senate tomorrow, reliable sources said tonight.

The "informal pact" followed an hour-long conversation between Mr. De Gasperi and Foreign Minister Gaetano Martino who returned last night from the London conference. Mr. Martino earlier today received Mr. De Gasperi's Foreign Under-Secretary, Mr. Antonio Segni, to arrange synchronization of the announcement in Rome and London.

Mr. Martino earlier today received Mr. De Gasperi's Foreign Under-Secretary, Mr. Antonio Segni, to arrange synchronization of the announcement in Rome and London.

U.S. Ambassador Mrs. Clare Boothe Luce hurried back from Rome to be on hand for the announcement. In a press conference in Naples she said the settlement of the dispute would enable Italy to concentrate on its Mediterranean role in Western Europe.

Italian troops were today reported moving to the borders of the north-western Trieste Zone "A" which includes the city and port and which has been under Anglo-American occupation, preparatory to taking over control.

The south-eastern Zone "B," mainly populated by Slovenes, is to be occupied by Yugoslavians. The agreement will guarantee minority rights. (UP, Reuter)

Ingrid Bergman to Testify in Rome Sex Scandal

ROME, Monday (Reuter). — Ingrid Bergman is to be questioned by the Italian Court in the office in London about the Wilma Montesi sex scandal which has rocked Italian society.

The Swedish film star in London is to be asked to confirm an alibi put forward by her. The Foreign Minister Paul Henri Spaak said Belgium will take no action on the London agreement until it has been ratified by the French National Assembly.

In Rome, meanwhile, Chancellor Konrad Adenauer has ordered his Cabinet for a special session tomorrow to report on the London agreement. This will probably be followed by a full-drawn debate. The Foreign Minister Paul Henri Spaak said Belgium will take no action on the London agreement until it has been ratified by the French National Assembly.

German Training Under Marshal Montgomery

PARIS, Monday (Reuter). — Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery will be in charge of the collective training of the new German army when it comes into being as part of NATO forces. SHAEF officials said here today.

This will not mean a new appointment for the Field Marshal who as Deputy Supreme Commander of NATO is responsible for the collective training of NATO troops under his command.

At present the 12 NATO nations — including no army — are contributing only part of their armed forces to the SHAEF Command but under the London agreement it is planned that the German contingent of 12 divisions be under NATO supervision.

He will advise the Federal Defence Ministry on training methods as he does with the other NATO governments, so as to bring them into line with SHAEF policies on coordination and integration. This would ensure that the German divisions would be able to work closely in the field with the American, British, French and other forces.

PARIS, Monday (Reuter). — Gen. Omar B. Coolidge, Deputy Commander in Chief of U.S. Forces in Europe, said today that big supplies of American military equipment had been shipped in Europe for delivery to the new German army when the order was given.

Nothing had yet been handed over to the Federal Republic and nothing would be delivered until full agreement was reached by the interested governments and until authority was granted. Gen. Coolidge said the new German army would be equipped principally by the U.S. and later would draw its supplies more and more from European sources.

Israel Asks UN Council To Discuss Suez Blockade

Gov't Demands End Of Border Threats

The Government warned yesterday that an end must be put in one way or another to the perpetual threat to the lives and property of Israelis living in border areas.

Recalling that five Israelis had been killed and eight wounded in 41 armed incursions from the Gaza Strip and Jordan in recent weeks, the Foreign Ministry spokesman pointed out that the settlers in border areas have maintained an iron restraint but that their anger and will to defend themselves demand an end to the present state of affairs in which Israel's efforts to ease the tension have yielded only increased Arab violence.

The Foreign Ministry spokesman's statement followed during the past several weeks Israel settlers who work and live in the area bordering the Gaza Strip and on Jordan have maintained an iron restraint in the face of continuing and unabated attacks of murder and aggression emanating from the border areas.

In this period five Israelis have been killed and eight injured; there have been 41 armed incursions and 19 cases of theft and attempted theft. Damage to property is estimated at 11,000,000. Efforts on the part of Israel calculated to ease the tension have yielded only increased Arab violence.

NEW YORK, Monday (Reuter). — Israel tonight asked for an early meeting of the U.N. Security Council to consider the blockade of Israel-bound shipping in the Suez Canal.

A meeting of the Council was expected to take place tomorrow. The Israeli request was contained in a letter from Mr. Abba Eban, the Israeli delegate, to the President of the Council.
